February 2009

From the President...

Dear PSNM Friends —

I believe we're off to a good start in 2009. We've had a number of our members step up to volunteer for various positions. I'm happy to announce that Julie Maas has agreed to Chair our National Show. I would like to thank Julie for her willingness to take this position. Quite a few of the National Show Committees are filled, however there are still plenty of opportunities to help make our 18th Annual Exhibition a success. I'd also like to thank Beverly Snyder for volunteering to take the Refreshment Committee duties for this year.

We will meet at Las Mañanitas (located at the corner of Rio Grande Blvd. and Indian School Road) after our February membership meeting to select the jurors for this year and the judge for 2010. Glenda Jensen will preside over the selection process. All are welcome to attend this meeting. Bring magazine articles, etc. to support your choices.

For those who weren't at the January membership meeting, we announced that along with the National Show this year, there will be a membership juried small works exhibition. It will be hung in the same manner as the miniature division of MasterWorks. The plan is to have a jury of our peers, as we did for the Visions Show which was held in 2006. One of the purposes of introducing this new section to the show is to include more of our local members, which will give us a larger pool of artists to sit at the show. Our thanks to Jill Rushton for offering to be the Chairperson for this new division of the National Show.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of you who have volunteered to serve PSNM in some capacity this year. I believe in spite of the poor economy, we have some very exciting plans for 2009.

— Elaine Koehler

Monthly Meeting at the Albuquerque Museum

Saturday, February 14 • 10 - Noon

Simultaneous Contrast Explained

Is it warmer? Is it cooler? Is it darker or lighter? These are questions artists ask themselves as they are creating a painting. When these questions are asked, it refers to simultaneous contrast, which is the relativity of everything we see. Lee McVey will talk about the theory of simultaneous contrast and demonstrate her approach to painting.

Lee is a signature member of 4 art societies including Pastel Society of America and Plein Air Painters of New Mexico. She has been featured in American Artist and International Artist magazines and included in two books, 100 Ways to Paint Landscapes and Plein Air New Mexico.

Coming Up...

March 14 - Fred Yost - "Patterns, Fractals, and Paint" experimental painting techniques that mimic nature's amazing and beautiful patterns.

2009 NATIONAL SHOW MEETING

It's time to select the 3 Jurors needed for 2009 and the Judge (and workshop instructor) for the 2010 National Show. Join us at Las Mañanitas after our regular meeting to assist in the selection process. Northeast corner of Rio Grande & Indian School. Ordering food is not required. Parking in rear.

January Program Review

by Jeanne Weitz & Leila Hall

Fred Miller: Portraits from Photos

Fred Miller, PSNM Vice President, opened the first meeting of the year with a no-nonsense lecture about painting from photos, with information for both novice and professional pastelists. The high point of the program was watching Fred paint a portrait using his favorite brand of pastels — Girault. If you missed this meeting, and you want to paint portraits successfully, you will have to enroll in one of Fred's portrait painting workshops.

A camera is a mechanical tool. A human's eyes are alive. Camera shots lie. Fred pointed out many of the difficulties encountered when painting a portrait from a photo. Photos have too many variables to be a perfect reflection of nature. The quality of camera/lens, ability of the photographer, distortion of images due to focus, reproduction of color and values, and distortions due to enlargement are only a few. Sure, photos are faster and cheaper than paintings and are great for recording action and movement such as children at play or a sporting event. A painting from the real thing has myriads of values and hues. It reveals the artist's spirit and originality. In other words, the more you paint from life, the better able you are to correct camera/lens distortions when painting from photos.

A quick survey revealed only 2 or 3 artists in the audience NEVER used photos. Today time is costly. Few artists have the financial resources adequate to hire a model for a long period of time. Artists commissioned to paint a portrait of a famous person discover that person is much too busy to be able to sit for more than for one or two sessions. Many contemporary artists use photos once in awhile, but they do change the composition to make it their work. Fred suggested that painting still lifes will go a long way in teaching you to see color. Additionally, he recommended a book that shows how to correct photographic distortions – Johnnie Liliedahl's book Photo-Imaging for Painters (however, read the fine print to make sure it works with your version of Photoshop or PS Elements).

Next he introduced CHARLIE, a 3 dimensional plaster head with prominent chin, cheek bones and nose

When Fred shone a warm light on Charlie, the shadows became cool hues. When Fred reversed the color of the light from warm to cool, the shadows became warm tones. Even landscape painters could take this to heart – warm sun on treetops mean cool shadows under them.

Prior to the meeting, Fred had made a charcoal sketch of a lumberjack. He said he would have preferred to have a live model like Bud Edmondson, who was in the audience, pose for him. But, often you have no choice but to work from a photo.

Fred worked standing on the stage facing his easel, but moved away from time to time so that the audience could see the actual steps as he worked. Fred likes the Girault brand pastels for most of his painting because they suit his way of working. The surfaces Fred prefers are Canson, Art Spectrum, and boards he prepares (a mixture of gesso, pumice, and acrylic paint for tinting).

Fred starts painting with his darkest values like many oil painters do. He admitted to using black at times, but never without mixing another color with it. Then he works up the value scale. His final touches are the lightest colors.

As he painted, Fred answered questions from the audience. Someone asked what he thought was a face's most important feature. (Many people say the eyes reflect the soul.) Fred also pointed out the eyes and nose form a triangular shape from which you can build the rest of the features. Of course, the mouth presents its own challenges. As John Singer Sargent said, "A portrait is a painting that has something wrong with the mouth.” With the lumberjack’s beard, the mouth was nearly hidden so that problem was eliminated. Fred said, “When painting a beard, avoid drawing a lot of individual hairs – massing and a few lines will do the trick.” He suggested taking a photo of a half finished portrait and placing it over the original photo to see how closely the features have been duplicated. Fred said, “Measuring and comparing the model’s features with length and width of those features on the portrait help.” The common problem of making the model’s nose too long can be eliminated this way – “Paint SHAPES of eyes, nose, and mouth we SEE and not what we think we know”, was Fred’s sound advise.

It was a great hour spent learning from a Master Portraitist! To see more of Fred’s paintings, go to his website: <http://web.mac.com/fmiller505>

TAUGHT BY PSNM MEMBERS

NEW! Vasili "Bill" Katakis Workshop

February 28 & March 1 • Albuquerque, NM

"Painting from Your Artist Core" — A two-day journey of discovery and play with Vasili Katakis, an award winning New Mexico artist, with 15 years of teaching experience. "I shut my eyes in order to see", Paul Gauguin. "Only when he no longer knows what he is doing, does the painter do good things", Edgar Degas. "There is no must in art because art is free", Wassily Kandinsky. This course is for artists who would like to experience painting from their artistic center, and learn how to access that state of mind more frequently. Learn to recognize the difference between the struggle for control and the freedom of playing. Explore ways to connect with your subject and approach it without getting hung up on technique. Ordinary paintings are transformed and become extraordinary paintings. See shapes, light, color temperature, blending, edging from an inner perspective. Soft pastels will be used for this class. Held at The Artist Studio in Hoffmantown Shopping Center. All levels are welcome. Bill's work can be seen at: www.vasiliart.com $150 for PSNM members, $175 non-members.

Specialized paper is required - available from Bill for $12. To register, email: vasiliart@aol.com or call 505-255-0313
